

Psyche and Society: The Work of the Unconscious

12th Annual Conference of Research in Jung and Analytical Psychology
Jungian Society for Scholarly Studies

Wednesday, July 24-Saturday, July 27, 2013
Chicago, IL

Deadline for Proposals: December 31, 2012

EXTENDED DEADLINE

The title of this conference, Psyche and Society: The Work of the Unconscious grows out of the themes and concerns of the 11th annual conference of JSSS (Affect and Action). During the conference the diverse nature of Jungian scholarship was explored and celebrated. One of the challenges which emerged was how the scholarly and felt concerns which emerged when considering social issues from a psychological perspective could be both contained and utilized.

What is our psychological and intellectual responsibility here? Indeed is it sensible to separate these two aspects of our lives? One of the distinctive qualities of analytical psychology is the way in which it holds together the individual and the collective, the personal response and the social responsibility.

*We have to realize, quite dispassionately, that whatever we fight about in the outside world is also a battle in our inner selves. In the end we have to admit that mankind is not just an accumulation of individuals utterly different from one another, but possesses such a high degree of psychological collectivity that in comparison the individual appears merely as a slight variant. How shall we judge this matter fairly if we cannot admit that it is also our own problem? Anyone who can admit this will first seek the solution in himself. This, in fact, is the way all the great solutions begin. (CW18: 927 Marginal Notes on Wittels: "Die Sexuelle Not," 1910)*

As we seek solutions in a spirit of enquiry and curiosity and as we find ourselves reflected in our world, JSSS invites proposals for presentation, performance, and conversation at this conference. We invite responses that explore the individual and collective aspects of psyche and society and their various relationships: personally, in families, as communities, in relation to culture, to nature and the arts, politics and science.

This conference offers an opportunity for interdisciplinary reflection, investigation and rumination as together we seek to clarify and understand the current state of our world and its affective influence upon us. Research that addresses the following questions will be particularly welcome:

What do psyche and society say to us regarding: nature, eco-systems, climate, space, animals and human bodies?

How might our reflections on psyche and society shed new light on: politics, cultural change, economics, education, international relations, conflict and war?

How does psyche and society influence our response and understanding of: race, gender, identity, nation, history and spirituality?

How does an awareness of the interaction between psyche and society help to understand cultural media? And other forms of cultural expression?

What responses are open and sustainable to individuals and communities in the face of such concerns?

The Program Committee welcomes submissions for research papers (single, joint or multi-authored), round tables (works in progress), panels, workshops, poster sessions and artistic presentations which explore the conference theme. You are invited to submit a 500-word (max) proposal. This should include an abstract of 50 words that can be published in the conference program. Please note, that the academic organizing committee may exercise its prerogative to reallocate presentation formats other than those originally applied for.

On a separate cover page, include the following information with your proposal:

Full name (including title if applicable)

Full mailing address and email address

Contact telephone numbers with international dialing code

Institution (professional body or university) including position or membership

If a candidate or trainee in a clinical training program, indicate which training body

Indicate your preferred presentation from the list below:

Paper (20 minute presentation; discussion time will be built in to schedule)

Creative Practice (film, dance, visual arts, music, performance, etc.)

Poster (a short presentation of 5-10 minutes given in front of a visual display of your research)

Panel (general theme/issue with 3+ presenters)
Round-table (15 minute presentation with 15 minutes discussion in small groups)
Workshop (interactive to be led by you for 30 minutes or more)
Other (Please specify)

Please indicate any technical needs such as PowerPoint, DVD, CD player, flipchart, overhead projector, etc.

Please email your proposal (use the outline provided and include ALL information) to the following email address: psycheandsociety@gmail.com by midnight on December 31, 2012 Pacific Standard Time.

Submissions will be acknowledged and a reply will be sent to you in February 2013. Further details of the conference including a booking brochure will be posted on the website as soon as possible: <http://www.thejungiansociety.org> www.thejungiansociety.org.