Richard Wilhelm came to China as a young missionary in 1899, a time when the country was under the exploitation of the colonial powers. He lived through revolts against foreigners, the passing of the imperial dynasties and the First World War. During these times of turbulent upheaval, he never ceased his quest for the deepest truths that may help mankind to cope with change and to shape their own lives. Richard Wilhelm did not baptize a single Chinese. Instead he accomplished some of the most significant translations of the 20th century that made available to the west CONFUCIUS, LAOTSE and other classical texts of DAOISM and most importantly the I CHING, THE BOOK OF CHANGES, the book that above all has served as an inspiration to so many western readers. Like C.G. Jung, with whom he was friends from the 1920s, Richard Wilhelm went in search of the universal wisdoms of mankind, those that resist the changes of history.

Bettina Wilhelm is the granddaughter of Richard. She was born in Shanghai and studied psychology in Basel, before getting her diploma in film in London. She has directed films and theatre and written screenplays. This documentary was premiered in 2012 and has received wide acclaim for its portrayal of the most distinguished translator and mediator of classical Chinese culture to the West. Bettina will introduce the film and there will be time for questions after the showing,
